

Global Health Security

India in 2019

Page No. 10

Definition of Global Health Security
Global health security is the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

Global Health Security

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

Global Health Security

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.

WHO's definition of Global Health Security
The World Health Organization (WHO) has defined global health security as the ability of all countries to prevent, detect, and respond effectively to global health threats.